Baroness mask sheet review

Hello everyone! My work has finally loosened up a bit, so I have some time to finally review something (and greatly do some skin care for my dull, tired skin). It's actually a holiday tomorrow, but I still have to work (I'll work from home, but still). When am I going to take a break? Since I still have tons of masks left (they're mostly baroness, just from different masks), I decided to put on one as soon as I finished cleaning. And also because I wanted to lie down and do nothing (while watching 2 weeks' worth of running man episodes). Let's start with the review! PRICEI bought this mask for Php 50 ($1) at BeautyMNL during their Buy 1 take 1 sale a month (or two) ago, so each mask should cost Php 25 ($0.5) each. Baroness had a lot of good reviews at BeautyMNL so I'm curious and decided to buy a lot so I can get to try different of her products. INGREDIENTSBad, list of bad ingredients. There is alcohol and smell. And where is the pearl extract/powder there? I'm starting to like it. Not at all. : cold_sweat: PACKAGINGSheet is packed just like any normal mask. Nothing special, and the picture is practical. FEEL/SMELLMy sad face while it's on. The first thing I noticed was the smell. Oh, My God, it smelled like disgusting orange fever medicine! Even though I hated it so much, I kept trying to dress him. The smell even intensified when it was on my face. It doesn't fit me either. If you look at it closely, you will see a lot of other parts that did not completely stick. The leaf was also thick and dripping with essence. EffectsI removed it after 15 minutes. He can't take the smell anymore! My neck began to itch from the essence that dripping on him. It also looks like my skin can't absorb the essence. My face improved after 30 minutes of removing the mask. OVERALL THOUGHTSThis mask is probably the worst I've ever used. If I compare it to a green tea mask, (See my review here: Green Tea Mask Review), I'd say you're better off with that one, although it also disappointed me a lot. At least I didn't feel any side effects on my skin. My skin isn't sensitive to any skin care I've tried so far, but that's where that streak ends. :p ensive: My neck (and chin) is still itchy when I write it, so I'll probably wash my face again and repeat my routine. I shouldn't have been so brave and used it because he knew the ingredients were bad. And let's not forget the bad sweet-and-sour fever that smells like syrup. FINAL RATING0/10 :-1: Please. Just don't use it. It's a complete waste of money. I didn't know I was going to meet a product that I would rate so low, or I would experience a supposedly good product, but it turned out to be a nightmare! This is where my review ends. I should really watch what many people have suggested and buy mediheal masks (yes!). Thank you so much for reading my post. I hope you stay happy, healthy and handsome. Annyeong! Hello everyone! My friend gave me a gifted baroness red ginseng 'mask sheet' and a month ago. I'm up to my last two out of 10 packs, so it would be a good time to write a review about it. Just a small note, after reviewing this product I will return to mainstream K-beauty & Western skin care brands! But I really just wanted to put my 2 cents on this product. Item Baroness Red Ginseng Mask Sheet (21g) Unfortunately, every description of this product is written in 'broken' English, resulting in strangely formed English sentences. The following description is from the product packaging (but reformulated due to broken English): This skin-matching mask helps your skin to be supple and younger, moisturizing and shaping the film on your skin. The end result is silky and fresh leather. Formulations water, glycerin, peg/PPG-17/6, co-lymer, glycereth – 26, trehalosis, sodium hyaluronate, peg – 60 hydrogenated castor oil, Beta – Glucan, Pyrus Malus(apple) Fruit extract, Panthenol, Alcohol, Methylparaben, Hydroxyethylcellulose, Red Ginseng Extract, Portulaca Oleracea Extract, Xanthan Gum, Carbomer, Triethanolamine, Phenoxylethanol, Tocopheryl Acetate, Allantoin, Disodium EDTA, Fragrance. 'Irritant' Triethanolamine: This ingredient aims to be a PH fixer for your skin. However, studies have shown that this ingredient cause allergic reactions. As such, this ingredient is usually labeled in many skin care databases. Additionally, this ingredient has been linked as a toxin to the human skin/immune system & respiratory system. Do not worry, because it is only for high doses (concentration more than 5%), but in order for skin care products to have this component, the concentration is limited to 0.5%. This ingredient is usually found in discontinuous (short) use of products such as face masks! It is not intended to prolong contact with the skin. This ingredient is quite far off the list, so I wouldn't worry about having a great concentration in this product. Alcohol: Questionable ingredient. This depends on your personal preferences and experience. If alcohol dries your skin/makes you break out, it's a good idea to stay away. 'Stars' Glycerin: It is found naturally topically on our skin, and helps our skin stay soft & supple. It 'pumps' water from under our layers of skin to the top. This will result in this ingredient treating dry skin conditions locally. However, when too much pure glycerin is added to the product, it may actually be negative for you. Needless to say, too much pure glycerin will continue to take water from our layers under the skin until it is dehydrated. Sodium hyaluronate: If you ever see this ingredient in a product, it's just a fancy way to say hyaluronic acid. This ingredient can hold up to 1000 times its moisture content, and unfortunately can only work topically to keep the skin hydrated. This ingredient works best as a serum, so it can penetrate deep into the skin! Always keep this in mind. Red ginseng extract: Of the different types of ginseng available, ginseng is grown in a different way than other types of ginseng. This allows the release of ginsenosides. It is both an antioxidant and anti-inflammatory component. Basically, this ingredient is a heck of an ingredient! I gathered this information from several scientific journals: Lee & Kim, 2014; Lee, Kim, Park, Chang, Kim & Suh, 2012. However, before delving into lengthy scientific research, I found an article written by Fifty Shades of A Snak to be written clearly & providing clear scientific jargon. Product reviews OK, so I used this face mask weekly. Compared to the 3w clinic 3w, a fresh royal jelly sheet mask, I really didn't see any other results. This basically helped soothe the skin, soothe the inflamed area (pimples popped out) & was super moisturizing. I'm really happy using this mask, mainly because the mask it's me is huge, and can cover the whole face! There is also a decent amount of serum. Thanks to this, the mask can remain on the face for 20 minutes without lyting. This is better than the 3w Clinic Fresh Royal Jelly Sheet Mask because this mask will wear out in 20 minutes. The smell for this mask is not amazing and smells a bit like chemicals with low key substances, but it will disappear over time. Overall: This sheet mask is ok for the price ($1.50c per sheet). The smell is a bit strong and the only real effects you will see are: moisturizing, soothing and anti-inflammatory properties. Repurchase: Not now, it's a good mask to try! But this is a mask is nothing special, just cost effective. Price: $15 for a pack of 10 ($1.50 each) Result seen from other blogger(s): LittleJoysInLife: Restore Smoothness & Strength Revive tired skin Keeps skin fresh Summary: Recommendation: Acne prone skin: Red ginseng will help soothe any inflammation from pimples Dry skin: Hyaluronic acid & Glycerin will help skin moisture WishTrend Disclaimer: All products are purchased with my money.
